

ABSTRACT

A device for measuring a weight of a seat, including the weight of an occupant sitting on the seat. The device includes a resilient member supported by at least one support point; a load sensor supported by a sensor support. The load sensor is in communication with the resilient member to receive the weight of the seat; the weight of the seat is applied between the at least one support point and the sensor point.